

BWI Marshall Celebrates 60 Years of Friendship

June 2010 marked the 60th anniversary of Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport. President Harry S. Truman dedicated Friendship International Airport on June 24, 1950, saying it exemplified "the spirit of growth and confidence with which our country faces the future."

Friendship International was renamed Baltimore/Washington International Airport in 1973. The Airport was renamed Baltimore/Washington International Thurgood Marshall Airport in 2005 to honor the former US Supreme Court Justice who grew up in Baltimore.

After 60 years BWI Marshall Airport continues to exemplify the spirit of Friendship. BWI Marshall was ranked as the BEST airport of its size (15-25 million passengers) in the world by the Airports Council International based on its 2009 Airport Service Quality survey.

AirTran Airways has increased service from BWI Marshall with the addition of three new markets, Grand Rapids, MI, Jacksonville, FL and Huntsville, AL. AirTran has also increased flights between BWI Marshall and Rochester, NY and Portland, ME.

Southwest Airlines has begun new service between BWI Marshall and Panama City, FL with three daily roundtrips. Southwest has also resumed service to Los Angeles and increased service to Denver, Las Vegas and Phoenix.

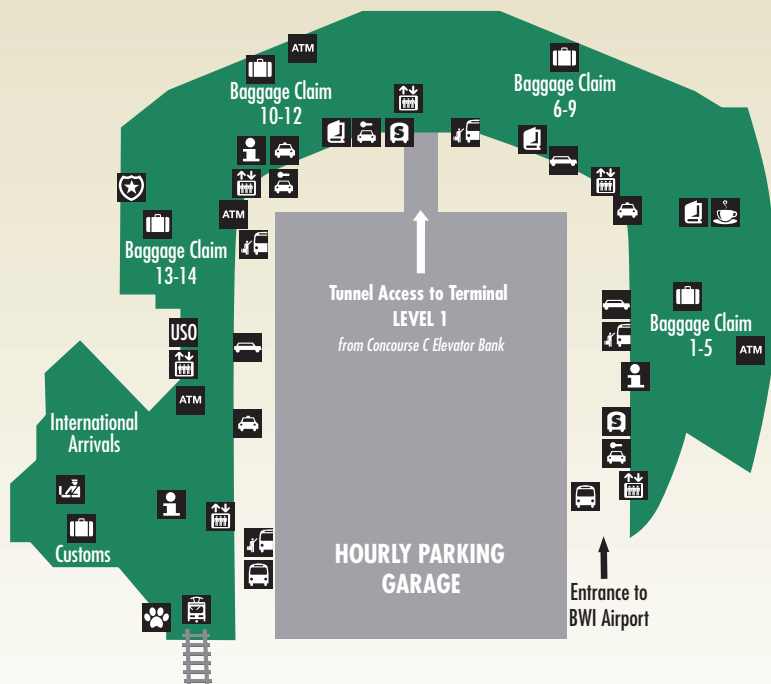

Delta Airlines has added an 11th daily flight to Atlanta, a 4th daily to Minneapolis and a 7th daily to Detroit.

USA3000 has begun twice weekly service between BWI Marshall and Bermuda. In September USA3000 will fly between BWI Marshall and both Cancun and Punta Cana.
